Stair, is the termination of Master or Mr; and the cry here intended is peculiar to the Parliament House, if not now lost even there. John Graham, was perhaps the last of the true breed. He was, like Milton s Nightingale and Mannkks Sutton-- Most musical--most melancholy, Hairb. (Standing at a table, where the paraphernalia of a croiojt, gilt poker, 8fc. are placed; and near two chairs of state.) Being a sufficient council, therefore, tell our Caller that he call no more. Crier. The Queen and her female women, number one--six! (Lady W. enters as Queen, followed by attendants, and taking her place in one of the chairs, is silently welcomed.) Hairb. My Lords and Gentlemen! In consequence of an event of which you are all aware, the removal of our predecessor to a higher sphere, I have been called to the important situation of your Emperor and King. Crowd. Long live the King! Hairb. (Assuming the crown.) Let us proceed to business. It is the law in ordinary realms, that the king has the choice of his ministers; but the custom that he only chooses one. That one, of course, must be of some one opinion; and the consequence is, he calls about him only parties of the same opinion. In this way, the king is only king of a faction. We mean to alter all that. We mean to be sovereign of the entire state, not of a part...
